Demand for foreign type cheese from the retail sector is steady. Demand for foreign type cheese from the food service sector varies from steady to stronger. Sellers note holiday travel in southern Europe is helping to increase sales as anticipated. Buyer demand for mozzarella remains particularly strong. Handlers in Europe note heat increases have taken a toll on cow comfort and milk production has decreased in June and July. European cheese production schedules are lighter. Industry sources note demand is outpacing production for some European cheese manufacturers. Spot cheese load availability is tighter. Seller sentiment and market tones are somewhat bullish.
